

We are never too old, or too young, to learn something new. This free online course will be life changing for some, and attitude changing for just about everyone!

The Indigenous Canada Course, offered free of charge through the University of Alberta, offers us an opportunity to become better informed about the history between Canada's Indigenous Peoples and the rest of us who call Canada home.

Becoming better informed will lead each of us to a much greater awareness and understanding of the issues that have affected our relationships with our Indigenous brothers and sisters. The course is beautifully and professionally presented and extremely well researched.

It will be life changing for some, and attitude changing for just about everyone! This course has had such a significant impact on those of us at St. Andrew's who have taken it ~ and we can honestly say we now have a much greater appreciation for Indigenous culture and a clearer understanding of our common history and how we got to where we are today. This is a course every Canadian can benefit from!

We owe it to ourselves and to one another to become better informed so that we can accept the truth and move forward to reconciliation with our Indigenous neighbours.
